The friends of Prof. C. J. Thomas ward meetinghouse last night to do occasion of his seventieth birthday. The affair, as stated in last evening's life, Among those present were the First Presidency, Elders George Reynolds and Seymour B. Young of the First Council of Seventy, President Angus M. Cannon of the Salt Lake Stake, Bishop Nelson A. Empey of the Thirteenth ward, and many veteran Church workers and musicians who have known Prof. Thomas for a great number of years.

The program began with a congratulatory address by President Joseph F. Smith, who referred in happy words to Prof. Thomas' career and of what use he had been among his fellow men. The nonored guest responded in feeling terms, after which a sumptuous repast was partaken of and toasts were re-sponded to as follows: "In London," leorge Reynolds; "The Orchestra Conductor," E. E. Beesley; "The Drama, Phil Margetts; "The Choir Leader," Phil Margetts; "The Choir Leader," C. R. Savage; "The Pin Dropper," Benj. Every number on the program was a gem, and the speeches were delivered of merriment. Before the crowd dispersed the profesor was presented with a silk um-breila, Mrs. Mary F. Kelly making the presentation address. All told, the fair was a grand success and reflected edit upon Duncan M. McAllister, toastmaster, and the Temple choir, unler whose auspices it was given. Charles J. Thomas is a native of Burnley, Lancashire, England, and at the tender age of seven, his father, Jo-seph K. Thomas, began teaching him music. The boy made such rapid progress that at the age of nine he able to appear at the Theatre Royal, Newcastle-on-Tyne, where he played the violin with his father; and he sub-sequently went to London, where he played in the orchestras of the princivards distinguished himself as a student in harmony. He was converted to the faith of the Latter-day Saints in Mr. Thomas traveled with an Italian opera company of which Formes was a member, and in 1854 he published a number of his own compositions, which were given at several f the London theaters. In 1856 he obliged to decline on account of his health, the position of bandmaster on an English war vessel, the Great Mari-borough. In 1858 he participated in the great Haendel festival given in Sydennam, where there were 2,000 voices in the chorus, and 500 musicians in the orchestra under Sir Michael Costa. After two years of further successful musi-cal effort, he removed to New York, where he filled several successful engagements with local orchestras, and ete in 1861 he removed to Utah and lo-

ated in Salt Lake City.

Mr. Thomas was appointed to the eadership of the late Capt. Ballo's band, and later became the first orchestra conductor in the Salt Lake theater. ENDEAVOR MEETING. Young People Have an Enjoyable Time At Fort Douglas.

Three hundred representatives of the young people's societies of Christian Endeavor went up to Fort Douglas last gathered en masse in the Thirteenth evening, and with the soldiers from the garrison packed the auditorium of the nonor to that worthy veteran on the post chapel full. The feature of the Rev. Dr. Pinkerton of the Christian "News," was in the nature of a re- church that charmed everybody, and ception, and the program as carried out | was delivered with a vigor and a power reviewed every phase of the professor's that carried conviction with what was said. The theme was on a Creator's love towards man, and with that in men's hearts it was really easier to do right than wrong. Then there was an anthem from the choir of the Christian hurch, and after further chapel exeries, the crowd adjourned to the as embly hall, six stout soldiers carrying the chapel organ with them for further musical exercises there. Earl Mackay of Held's band favored the audience rith a saxaphone solo, Miss Jennie Williamson playing the accompaniment; and there followed a French horn solo, "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep.
A "Hobby social" was then indulged in to the amusement of the many who participated, bugle calls being used in connection with it. Then came refresh-ments provided by Franklin, and an informal social which was much enjoyed. The soldiers are greatly pleased with the interest shown in their welfare by the Christian Endeavorers of this city and the result of this successful social will be a larger attendance than ever on the Thursday night Endeavor meet-

FADS OF REIGNING ROYALTIES.

Most people cherish a fad of some sort or other, and kings and queens are no exception to the general rule.

King Edward's pet fad comes out when he is exercising hospitality at his beloved Norfolk home. For very many years past every visitor to Sandringham has been weighed on arriving and on departing. The queen's especial fad has a daintiness well in keeping with her personality. It is that of having her pocket oney made perfectly clean and brigh before she fingers it. Whenever check is turned into hard cash for he the coins are scrubbed in a lather o spirits of wine, water and soap before eing placed in her purse, and any change that may be tendered her whe aking purchases is taken charge of y the lady-in-waiting until it has been objected to a like process of purifi-

The particular fad of the handsom bon vivant who occupies the throne of Portugal is that of never having a drinking vessel refilled. A fresh cup every time he wants a further supply of liquid refreshment, and as his is a copious drinker, as well as good trencherman, it is no uncommon thing for four or five relays of these utensils to be placed beside him in the course of each meal.

There is no more masculine monarch in all Europe than the German emperor, yet his one fad is the singular effeminate one of having all his boots lined with a special make of soft satir Every species of footgear made for the kaiser, from dancing shoes to military riding boots, is so lined. Moreover, the satin has always to be of the same shade-a particularly delicate tone of Prussian blue, and the kaiser's maker had a large order for hunting tops returned on his hands a year or two ago because their lining trifle darker than the precise tint favored by William II.

The emperor of Russia's faddiness is confined to his sleeping arrangements. Wherever he may go he never sleeps between any sheets except those of fine linen woven especially for the usof the royal family of Russia, and having the imperial arms and cipher embroid ered upon them. Even during the historic visit to France, when the newlymade Franco-Russian alliance was ce mented and celebrated with all manne f pageants and popular rejoicings, this fad maintained its sway, and the first hing the czar's servants did on reach ing French soil was to unmake the bed prepared for his use, and make it up again with his own linen.-Tit-Bits.
